

From: Sandy Alto
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/23/02 11:37pm
Subject: AOL-what a bunch of money grubbers

It's beyon my comprehension that any judge or jury could find AOL's latest case against Microsoft anything but vicious manipulation of the justice system. They have calculated this move from the moment they purchased Netscape, but have done NOTHING to improve Netscape to enable it to compete in the marketplace. Look into the resources they took away from Netscape after it was bought. This current move is ludicrous and just an attempt to further complicate matters for a terrific company (Microsoft) that is always looking out for their customers.

It's time for the DOJ to put competition back in the marketplace, let customers decide what services they want from companies. Geez if Netscape was worth its salt, people would happily spend a few bucks to purchase it. I'd like to point out that there are plenty of other browsers available in the marketplace, not everyone cares to or does use IE.

These charges from AOL are outlandish and should be thrown out.

Sandy Alto
19012 90th Pl. N.E.
Bothell, WA 98011